2006 Reviewed

The Spectator's predictions for the 2006 season were published in the preview edition in April. Let's take a look at how the prognosis compares with the actual results.

EAST

Maple Plain was predicted to win and they did, but they won on the basis of their pitching. Their team hitting average dropped from .314 in 2005 to .289 in 2006.

Mound was picked for third as they hoped to return to 2004 form. They rallied many times to win in the last inning and did get back above .500 by going from 4 wins last year to 9 in 2006.

Loretto was forecast for second based on their hitting, but actually finished near the bottom in hitting and near the top in pitching stats..

Albertville finished fourth coming up one win short of their 2005 season record.

The River Bandits struggled at the end of the year and matched their 2005 record, finishing with 3 wins.

CENTRAL

St Michael, picked for 3rd, ran off 11 straight wins to begin the season and won the division by 3 games.

D-C won the same number of games as they did tying for the 2005 crown. Picked to win it this year, D-C ran into a couple of surprise upsets, but still finished with a strong 12-5 league record.

The close race predicted in the division turned out to be for 3rd place as Delano (predicted to be 4th) and Hutch (predicted for 5th) tied for 3rd with 8 wins and 9 losses. Maple Lake (picked for 2nd) finished a game behind with a disappointing 7-10 record.

WEST

Howard Lake was predicted to win the West if they got a little improvement at the plate. They got a lot of improvement at the plate and won 10 in a row to run away with the division.

The Bulldogs were expected to start slow and gain ground as the season progressed to finish second. They actually started out slightly ahead in the division and never gained the consistency expected, but did finish second.

The Kings finished third with 6 victories and had breakthrough victories over D-C and the Diamond Devils. They were predicted to be improved, but probably still finish last. Nice season!

Monticello fielded a young and unknown team that needed a year to rebuild and finished fourth by a game (predicted to be third).
